Part II. Activities and Operational Information

1. USAction was established to promote the public interest, including, but not limited to the promotion of economic, racial, social and environmental justice in the United States. USAction promotes the principle that diversity, tolerance, racial justice and multiculturalism are great values to our democratic society and seeks, through its activities, campaigns and programs, to promote their importance

USAction and its affiliate members engage in direct (local and state legislatures and the United States Congress) as well as grassroots lobbying on the wide range of public interest and consumer issues, including, but not limited to: social, human and health security (e.g., working to ensure the availability and accessibility of health care for all Americans or the strengthening of social security and Medicare); promoting public education; civil justice (e.g., promoting a fair jury trial system as a basic element of democracy); environmental concerns (e.g., regulatory reform, climate change and air quality standards); public utilities deregulation, including telecommunications; workplace protections (e.g., a workplace free from discrimination, freedom of association, minimum wage safeguards); and, campaign finance reform (e.g., exploring public financing options or programs to reinvigorate democracy).

Communication with its members as well as the general public on these issues will be conducted through the mail (a newsletter), telephone (conference calls), on the Internet (web site and e-mail), media appearances and media advertising. It is anticipated that some communication with members will occur at regularly-scheduled meetings of USAction.

USAction recognizes that one of its most effective organizing tools is the ability to work collaboratively in coalition with other organizations, many of which are members of USAction. Thus USAction will work in coalition with a wide range of organizations and groups (e.g., other public interest, labor, women, senior citizen, faith-based, consumer, good government, education, disability rights) to develop strategies which address the foregoing issues, analyze an issue's strengths and weaknesses and create momentum for reform, change or modification as appropriate.

For example, it could work collaboratively with senior citizen and labor organizations to expand access to health insurance, both by winning public funding for such benefits and by working to ensure that those eligible are made of these public programs. It may also work with labor organizations on their efforts to enforce the World Trade Organization

(WTO) rules guaranteeing workers' basic rights and reverse the inequities in the current global economic system. It is working with research centers, parent advocacy organizations, civil rights groups and national and state teacher organizations to articulate a vision for educating students for democracy and to develop a program and message which strengthens public education. USAction is part of a coalition of consumer rights, labor and trial attorney organizations to oppose limitations on the amount of monetary awards given to victims of professional malpractice or products liability. It works with good government groups (Common Cause, League of Women Voters) and other reform groups (Public Campaign) on the virtues of campaign finance reform, including identifying projects in which USAction's priority issue campaigns can link to promoting campaign finance reform.

USAction employs 3.5 senior staff along with the corresponding support staff who are responsible for all aspects of the organization (program, financial and administrative). It is assisted in fundraising, outreach to other organizations and issue development by its 90-member Board of Directors.
